This bill is part of a multi-state effort to coordinate third party administrator filings. The Department will continue using current procedures unless an applicant's state of domicile has enacted the uniform code, then the procedure set forth in this bill can be followed.

Background - Nonresident Administrator License: A person may file for a nonresident administrator license if they are currently licensed in a state that has comparable licensing requirements. If the Commissioner is able to verify the nonresident administrator's homestate license through an electronic database and duly notifies the applicant, no filing is required. There are currently 216 non-domestic third party administrators licensed in Indiana.
